

Prologue

Creator gave the means of liberation from the illusion of samsara to a multitude of myriads of beings. Each layer contains microcosms of beings; these beings form the greater Cosmos, which forms macrocosmic bodies of multitudes of layers of beings. Laws in each dimension of the universe unite to create more refined laws. Each law has a definite boundary in the universe. Only by incorporating the Divine Law can the paradises become truly boundless and immeasurable adamantine ways. This formless divine law sprang out of the emptiness of the cosmic body's time-space continuum, which spans versions of kalpas upon kalpas of eternities. It contains a great many particles of gates that reach the outermost layers of various areas of heaven, molding into new cosmic bodies as the Divine Law.

Accept the seemingly impenetrable mystery that pertains to the past, alters the present, and fortifies the bright future. Pains of the physical body transmuted through the five senses by the central nervous system are food for thought. Panacea for the suffering of mind lies in the realization of the true nature of the way. Leaving the ordinary world, reaching enlightenment, and entering the gates of no-life amounts to the completion of the first big circle of cultivation.

An ordinary human is a sinner, incapable of ever changing his sinful nature; his only chance of salvation is faith in the Divine. God is good and does not want to complicate things for you. It is not a problem for him to govern this earth, to take care of ordinary human affairs, or to shepherd the weak. By exposing the evil, one forwards oneself into a bright future. To release yourself from the chains of attachments, may your thoughts and actions be focused day and night on the Divine Way.
